Editorial

"ESG Kompakt" serves as a platform to strengthen the exchange between various players in the financial and real economy and to illuminate the topic of sustainability from various perspectives and put it up for discussion.

To this end, each seminar will focus on a specific aspect and look at it from both a theoretical and practical perspective. These topics can be of macroeconomic and political relevance, include regulatory aspects, shed light on the integrability of ESG criteria in existing investment approaches, discuss the data basis of existing ESG ratings or, in the broader context, examine the interfaces of ESG and impact investing, philanthropy and the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

The overall aim is to bring together the interests, expectations and challenges of investors, the private sector and policy makers in one forum and to stimulate a holistic discussion on sustainable development.

The upcoming seminar on the topic "Sustainable Finance – Approaches to improve the state of play" stands under the patronage of the Liechtenstein Bankers Association and the CFA Society Liechtenstein.

With this second seminar of 2022, we will look at Sustainable Finance and Investing from a more international perspective and discuss ESG and Impact Investing again, but this time with the aim of establishing a new and more convincing concept for Sustainable Investing.

After the introduction and the inputs of our experienced guest speakers Stephen Nolan and Charly Kleissner, we will have a panel discussion and seminar participants are also invited to jump in with questions and comments.

We are looking forward to your participation as well as an exciting and lively discussion.
