The first impression of Riga is, that it is a really cold city. A city where you rather stay inside the building than actually go outside. But if you go outside you can enjoy beautiful parks in the center of the city. I am really impressed by the generosity of the parks. I understand it as a reminder of the past time, when Riga was part of the sovjet union.

It was absolutely amazing how the city changed from this cold and rather hard city in winter time to a very charming and vibrant young place in summer time. Not only the days got a lot longer as the sun started to set later and later, also the warm weather lead many more people into the beautiful parks and the blooming trees and the green fields make this place a perfect place to live and study.

The Riga Technical University is situated on a half island, called Kippsala. It is on the opposite side of the River Daugava from the city centre and old town. Kippsala is a campus that has a few university buildings, the architecture faculty is in the newest building at the very end of the campus.

Studying at the RTU was mostly a lot of fun, when the teachers did speak English we could follow them more or less. Sadly the students of the faculty are not very outgoing, that is why it was very hard to get in contact with them. Surely the idea to separate Erasmus student from the rest of the students in all the subjects did not help that much in making contact and getting to know each another.

Over all I have to say although the semester did not go the way I imagined it, I had a lot of freedom and time to explore and enjoy being a student, what is the thing I miss at my home university the most.
